Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 26 are True or False, and choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Eating healthy diet is important for everyone. When we eat healthy food, our bodies feel stronger, and we have more energy. A healthy diet means eating the right number of different foods everyday.

To have a healthy diet, we should eat fruit and vegetables often. They give us vitamins, minerals and fibre, which help our bodies work well. Try to eat many different colours of fruit and vegetables, like apples, carrots, banana and broccoli. This helps us get many good nutrients.

It is also important to eat some foods with protein like chicken, fish, eggs, beans and nuts. Protein help us build strong muscles and bones. Don't forget to eat whole grains such as brown rice, whole wheat bread and oats. Whole grains give us energy and keep us feeling full.

We should drink enough water every day, about six to eight glasses. Water helps our bodies stay healthy and keeps our skin looking good.

Try not to eat too much sugar, salt or fat. These foods can be bad for our health if we eat them every day. Although fast food, chips and sweets taste good, they are not healthy if eaten too often.

Eating well is not difficult. Just remember to choose healthy foods, drink water and eat a variety of fruit and vegetables. If we eat healthy food, we will feel better and be happier.

23. Eating well means more healthy food and stopping eating fast food absolutely.
24. Foods with protein are unnecessary as vegetables are more important.
25. Drinking water every day is important since it helps us improve our complexion.
26. It's hard for us to practice a healthy diet because it requires careful planning.

27. What is the main idea of the passage?

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 26 are True or False, and choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

FOMO, or "Fear of Missing Out," is something many people, especially young people, might often experience. It means you worry that you are not part of something fun or important. For example, you might see photos on social media of your friends at a party. If you were not there, you might feel sad or think you are missing something special. FOMO can happen in many situations. Maybe your friends are talking about a new movie, and you have not seen it, or your friends go on a trip, but you cannot go with them. When this happens, you may feel left out or nervous because you want to be included. FOMO can push people to do things they don't really want to do, just because they are afraid of missing out. For example, you might say "yes" to going out when you are tired, or you might check your phone often to see what others are doing. That's why if you feel this way, try to focus on your own happiness. Don't compare yourself too much to others since everyone has a different life, opportunities and challenges. In addition, taking a break from social media can help you relax and focus on real life. Also, talking to your friends or family about your feelings can give you comfort and support. Last but not least, remember you cannot be everywhere at once, and that's okay. Enjoy the things you do, and do not worry too much about missing out.

23. FOMO stands for "Fear of Missing Out," and it often affects young people.
24. Seeing party photos on social media always makes people feel happy.
25. People with FOMO usually prefer to stay offline and ignore what others are doing.
26. You cannot join every event or activity, and that is perfectly fine.
27. What is the main idea of the passage?
- A. A feeling of not being included in exciting things among young people
- B. A feeling of not being given opportunities to go everywhere in the world
- C. A feeling of not being able to contact others on their phones everywhere
- D. A feeling of not being the centre of a crowd in any important event
28. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the text?
- A. FOMO may occur when classmates discuss a movie you haven't seen.
- B. Sometimes FOMO pushes people to say yes to activities even when they are tired.
- C. Many people tend to check their phones before bed because of FOMO.
- D. One way to handle FOMO is by focusing on your own happiness.

Everyone has a picture of their dream house in their mind. For me, my dream house is a place where I feel truly happy and comfortable. I have three main ideas for how I would like it to be.

First, I want my dream house to be close to nature. I imagine it next to a forest or a lake. I love the idea of waking up every morning and seeing trees, flowers and birds outside my window. It would be peaceful and quiet. I could go for a walk in the fresh air or have a picnic in my garden with my family and friends.

Second, my dream house should have big windows that let in plenty of sunlight. Natural light would make the rooms bright and cheerful. I would also like to have a balcony where I can sit and enjoy a cup of tea, read a book or watch the sunset in the evening.

Finally, I want a cosy living room where everyone can relax together. It will have a comfortable and a fireplace. We can watch movies, play games or talk about our day. I think it is important to have a warm space of family moments.

In conclusion, my dream house must be close to nature, full of light and have a warm living room. These ideas make me excited about the future. Maybe one day my dream house will become real.

Bhutan is a small country in the Himalayas, located between India and China. Many years ago, it was a very quiet and simple place where people mostly lived in the villages. They grow rice, maize and vegetables. There were not many roads, and most people travelled by foot or on horses. Their houses were made of wood and stone, and families lived close together. In the past, Bhutan was largely closed to the outside world. Foreigners were not allowed to visit, and there was no television or Internet. The king and the government wanted to protect the country's culture and traditions. Most people practiced Buddhism, and colourful festivals and beautiful monasteries were an important part of daily life.

Today Bhutan is changing, but it still preserves many of its traditions. Now, there are more roads and cars. People can use mobile phones and the Internet. Children attend school, and study English. Tourism is allowed, but the government carefully controls the number of visitors to protect the country's nature and culture. Bhutan is famous for its concept of "Gross National Happiness," which means the government focuses on people's well-being, not just economic growth. Despite current modern developments, Bhutanese people continue to wear traditional clothes and celebrate old festivals. The country is a unique place where the past and present live together. Bhutan shows the world that it is possible to grow without losing your identity.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 26 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27-28.

Many people move from towns back to the countryside for different reasons. Some people leave the busy city to find a quieter and more peaceful life. In towns, there are many cars, tall buildings and constant noise. People often rush to work and do not have much time to relax. The air can be polluted, and the streets are often crowded. When people return to the countryside, they can enjoy fresh air and beautiful nature. There are green fields, trees and flowers everywhere. It is easy to go for a walk or ride a bicycle. Life in the countryside is usually quieter, and people know their neighbors better. Life moves at a slower pace, and many people feel happier and less stressed. Others come at a slower pace to be near their family and old friends. They want to grow food, keep animals or start a small business. Houses in the countryside are often bigger and less expensive than those in towns. People can have gardenseven small farms. Of course, living in the countryside is not always easy. There are fewer shops and not many things to do. It can be hard to find a job. However, for many, coming back to the countryside means a better life, closer to nature and family. They feel more relaxed and enjoy simple things every day.

23. Some people move from towns back to the countryside for a wealthier life.

24. People can hardly enjoy the fresh air and beautiful nature in the countryside.

25. Houses in towns are often smaller and more expensive than those in the countryside.

Strong Again: The Path to Self-Healing

Healing oneself is important for a happy and healthy life. When we get hurt or feel sad, we should take steps to help ourselves feel better. Healing can happen both in the body and the mind. When you are sick or have a minor injury, getting enough rest is very important. Sleeping well at night helps the body fix itself. Eating healthy food, like fruit and vegetables, also gives the body strength. Drinking water and doing light exercise can help you heal faster.

Healing is not just for the body. Sometimes, we feel sad, worried or stressed. To heal your mind, you can talk to someone you trust, like a friend or family member. Sharing your feelings can make you feel lighter and less burdened. Doing activities you enjoy, like reading, listening to music or walking outside, can also support healing. Breathing deeply and slowly is a good way to calm your mind and body.

It is important to be patient because healing can take time. Don't be afraid to ask for help when you need it. Doctors, teachers, family can give you support. Remember, everyone heals at their own speed. Taking small steps every day can make a big difference. Be kind to yourself and believe that you can heal. With time, self-care and support from others, we can all become strong again.

23. Our body can repair itself if we sleep as much as possible.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Homelessness is a serious problem in the United States. There are several cities in the USA with large homeless populations such as New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Without a safe place to live, many people are forced to sleep on the streets, in parks or even in their cars. Others stay in temporary shelters for the homeless. Homelessness can happen to anyone. Children, adults and older people can all be affected. There are numerous factors that contribute to homelessness. People can lose their homes because of losing a job, struggling with money, facing family problems or coping with health issues. While some people are homeless for a short time, others face this hardship for many years. The experience of homelessness remains extremely harsh, exposing people to severe weather, illness and social isolation. To address this issue, the government and many non-profit organizations try to help homeless people through many ways. They give them food, clothes, shelters and job programmes. Volunteers also help by giving their time or money. In short, homelessness is a problem that needs everyone's help. If people work together, they can help more people find a safe home and a better life.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Traffic jams are a big problem in many developing countries. Every day, people spend significant amount of time stuck in traffic, either in their cars or on crowded buses because road networks are unable to handle the high volume of vehicles. This not only leads to delays in reaching workplaces and schools but also causes a lot of stress. Several solutions can help alleviate this problem. First, improving public transport is essential. Expanding the number of buses and trains, while ensuring they are clean, reliable and safe, would encourage more people to use them instead of relying on private cars. This will make the roads less crowded, second, government can invest in better infrastructure by constructing additional lanes , widening existing roads, and repairing damaged surfaces to improve traffic flow. Third, people should be encouraged to cycle or walk, especially for short distances. Building special lanes for bicycles and safe sidewalks for walking can help greatly. Another solution is to improve traffic control through lights and signs. When drivers follow the rules and there is sufficient enforcement by police or cameras, congestion can be reduce. Finally, promoting carpooling is an effective way to cut down on the number of vehicles on the road. In conclusion, while traffic jams remain a pressing issue in many developing nations, coordinated planning and practical solutions can significantly ease congestion, making people's daily life more efficient and sustainable.

23. Traffic jams in developing countries waste a large amount of people's time every day.

24. Cycling and walking are recommended only for long-distance travel in cities.

25. Traffic lights and signs are mentioned as causes of traffic jams.

26. Sharing cars with others is considered to help reduce traffic jams.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Everyone feels afraid sometimes. Fear is a natural feeling when we try something new, speak in public or meet new people. However, if we want to grow and enjoy life, we need to learn how to face our fears and become more confident. First, it is important to understand what makes us afraid. We often feel simply scared because we don't know what will happen. To overcome this, try to learn more about the situation. The more you know, the less afraid you will feel. Second, take small steps. If you are afraid of speaking English, begin by talking with a close friend. Then, try to join a small group. With practice, you will start to feel more comfortable and less nervous over time. Third, remember your past successes. Think about times when you were afraid but still did something difficult. This can make you feel strong and proud. Everyone makes mistakes, but mistakes help us learn and grow. Also, surround yourself with positive people. Friends and family can support you and give you courage. When you share your feelings, you won't feel alone. Lastly, believe in yourself. Say kind words to yourself, such as "I can do it." Confidence will come more easily as you try. Overcoming fears is not easy, but with practice, you will become braver and more confident each day. Never give up on yourself!

- 22. At times, you may feel afraid since you aren't aware of future events.
- 23. You can overcome your fears as fast as you can.
- 24. Remembering your achievements is also a way to grow confidence.
- 25. You should never make mistakes as they will make you negative.

26. What is the main idea of the passage?
- A. How to face fear without needing support from others.
 - B. How to get over fears and grow your confidence.
 - C. How to make mistakes and learn from them.
 - D. How to overcome fears and never give up on yourself

27. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the text?
- A. Understanding the root of our fear is the first step toward overcoming it.
 - B. Regular practice gradually makes us more relaxed and less anxious.

- C. Saying negative things to yourself can lower confidence.
D. Reflecting on past achievements can remind us of our inner strength.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Electric vehicles (EVs) are becoming more popular every year. Many people believe that electric cars can replace cars that run on fossil fuels, like gasoline or diesel. There are several good reasons for this idea. First, EVs are better for the environment. They don't produce as much air pollution as traditional cars. When people drive EVs, there is less smoke and fewer harmful gases in the air. This can help prevent climate change and make cities cleaner and safer for everyone. Second, electric cars are often cheaper to use in the long run. Electricity usually costs less than gasoline, and EVs require less maintenance. For example, they don't need oil changes or new spark plugs, which saves drivers money. However, electric cars also have some drawbacks. They can be more expensive to buy, and charging stations are not always easy to find, especially in small towns or in rural areas. In addition, some models cannot travel as far as fuel-powered cars before needing a recharge, which can be inconvenient for people who drive long distances. In conclusion, while EVs offer many advantages, they still face challenges. They may not completely replace fossil fuel vehicles everywhere right now, but with better technology and more charging stations, they could become the main choice for drivers in the future.

23. More people prefer to drive EVs on roads nowadays.

24. Fossil fuel vehicles need less maintenance than electric vehicles.
 25. EVs are a convenient choice for drivers who travel in the countryside.
 26. Fossil fuel vehicles will remain irreplaceable in the future.
27. What is the main idea of the passage?
 A. The advantages of driving electric vehicles. B. The disadvantages of driving electric vehicles.
 C. The comparison between two types of vehicles. D. The replacement of electric vehicles right now.
28. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the text?
 A. Better technology could solve many current EV problems.
 B. EVs produce fewer harmful gases when driven.
 C. Recycling old EV batteries is a growing challenge.
 D. Spark plugs are unnecessary in electric cars.

Many students spend most of their day at school, so it is important for them to learn basic first aid. First aid can help save lives and prevent small injuries from becoming more serious. If someone gets hurt at school, such as having a cut, a fall or a nosebleed, students with first-aid knowledge can help until an adult or the school nurse arrives. For example, if a classmate cuts their finger, another student can wash the wound with clean water and cover it with a bandage. If someone twists an ankle while playing sports, other students can help them sit down and rest while waiting for help. Knowing what to do in these situations can make a big difference and help everyone feel safer at school. Learning first aid is not difficult. Many schools offer first aid lessons or have clubs where students can practice what to do in emergencies. These lessons teach students how to stay calm and follow simple steps. First aid skills are useful in other places, too, like at home or in the park. In conclusion, knowing first aid is very important for students. It helps them protect themselves and others. When students understand first aid, they are more confident and ready to help if something happens at school.

23. Students can use first aid to help classmates until an adult arrives.
24. if a classmate cuts their finger, students should leave the wound open before cleaning it.
25. First aid lessons can help students feel more confident in emergencies.
26. Schools rarely allow students to give first aid to others due to safety problems.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Live-streaming has become a popular way to sell products online. Many people enjoy watching live videos of sellers explaining and demonstrating products in real time. This method allows viewers to ask questions and see the products up close before buying. However, there are some risks involving live-streaming sales that both buyers and sellers should consider. One risk is that products may not be as good as they appear during live-stream. Sellers can use special lighting, camera angles or filters to make products look better than they are in reality. As a result, customers might feel disappointed when the items arrive. Another risk is the responsibility of scams. Not all live-stream sellers are trustworthy. While some may take the money but never send the products, others may sell fake or low-quality goods. Buyers should always check the sellers' reputation and reviews before making a purchase. Privacy is also a concern. During live-stream live-streaming information may be shared by accident, putting both buyers and sellers at risk. It is important to be careful about what is shown or said online. Finally, live-streaming can be stressful for sellers. They need to perform well in front of an audience, answer questions quickly and handle technical problems. If something goes wrong, it can damage their reputation. Despite these risks, live-streaming remains a popular way to shop and sell. Being aware of the dangers can help everyone stay safe and have a better experience.

23. Sellers can use tricks during live-streams to make products look better.
24. Fake or low-quality goods are uncommon in live-streaming shopping.
25. Live-streaming can sometimes put personal privacy at risk.
26. Because of risks, live-streaming is becoming less attractive to shoppers.

27. What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. Benefits and opportunities of live-stream shopping and selling.
- B. Advantages and conveniences of live-stream shopping and selling.
- C. Rewards and possibilities of live-stream shopping and selling.
- D. Risks and challenges of live-stream shopping and selling.

28. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the text?

- A. Sellers earn more money from live-stream than from traditional stores.
- B. Checking a seller's reviews can reduce the chance of scams.
- C. Live-streaming can be stressful for sellers because they must perform and solve problems live.
- D. Being aware of the possible dangers can help both buyers and sellers have a better experience.

Read the following passage. Decide whether the statements from 23 to 27 are True or False, and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D) for questions 27 and 28.

Last weekend, I visited an exhibition titled “Hà Nội in the Subsidy Period” at the city museum. It recreated life in Hà Nội from the late 1970s to the mid-1980s, when goods were scarce and ration coupons were needed for everyday necessities. The rooms were decorated with old furniture, radios and bicycles. There were displays of food coupons, clothing cards and even soap bars, all of which were the items people used during that difficult time. Walking through the exhibition, I saw many photos of crowded streets and markets where people waited in long lines to buy rice or meat. There were also first-hand accounts from residents describing how families shared small apartments and prepared simple meals with limited ingredients. Many people became resourceful, making toys from recycled materials and fixing broken items instead of buying new ones. A guide explained that the government distributed most goods, and families learned to save every little thing. Despite the hardships, people remembered the period with a sense of community and mutual support. Children play together in the streets, and neighbours help each other. The exhibition ended with a short film showing Hà Nội’s transformation after the subsidy period, a city growing more modern and dynamic, but highlighting how the memories of cooperation and solidarity remained important to many people today.

23. The exhibition recreated life in Hanoi in the mid-19th century.

Bullying is a problem in many schools. It happens when one student or a group tries to hurt, scare or control another student. They bully others because they feel insecure, want to feel powerful or try to fit in with certain groups. Bullying can take many forms, such as calling people names, spreading rumours or making threats. It can occur in classrooms, playgrounds, cafeterias or hallways. Some students are also bullied during group activities or sports where they may be excluded or laughed at. It can make students feel sad, lonely or scared, and sometimes they lose confidence in themselves. Victims of bullying may also have trouble concentrating on their school work and may even avoid going to school. To prevent bullying students should treat each other with respect and speak kindly about their ideas. People who see bullying should speak up and support the bullied students. Teachers and staff can help by setting clear rules, supervising students and encouraging a friendly school environment. Schools can also organise activities that teach respect, kindness and team work. By working together, students, teachers and families can make schools safer and more welcoming. When bullying is stopped, students can focus on learning, feel more confident and enjoy their time at school. Respect, kindness and understanding are important for creating a positive school community.

23. Students bully others because they feel confident and don't want to fit in any groups.
24. Common forms of bullying include saying hurtful things, spreading rumours and making threats.
25. Teachers and school staff have little influence on reducing bullying.

Protecting Our Planet from Plastic Waste

Plastic pollution is a serious threat to our planet. Every year, millions of tons of plastic end up in the oceans, rivers and on land. Many animals can accidentally eat plastic, which can harm or even kill them. That's why it's essential to search for ways to reduce plastic waste and protect nature. One important step is to limit single-use plastics. Items such as straws, plastic bags and bottles are typically used only once and then discarded. Many supermarkets and stores now provide paper or cloth bags instead of plastic ones. Some cities have also banned plastic straws and encourage the use of reusable metal or bamboo alternatives. Recycling is another practical solution. When people recycle plastic, it can be turned into new things, like clothes, furniture or even roads. However, not all plastics are easy to recycle. Therefore, it is important for people to sort their waste properly and place recyclable items in the correct bins. Individuals can also help by joining clean-up events. These events bring volunteers together to pick up plastic trash from beaches, parks and streets, which helps make the environment cleaner and safer for both wildlife and humans. Finally, education plays a vital role. When people learn about the dangers of plastic pollution and how to make better choices, they can help to reduce the problem. Every small effort counts, and together we can create a big change.

23. Millions of tons of plastic are thrown into the environment every year.
24. Most types of plastic are simple to recycle into new products.
25. Some cities do not allow the use of plastic straws.
